

Your friend was sexually assaulted on the way to school, and now you're afraid to walk there. You miss a week of school. Move back 3 spaces.

Someone grabs your hips without your permission while you're walking down the school hallway. You turn around and tell him never to do that again. Move forward 2 spaces.

Your best friend confides in you that she has an eating disorder, and you accompany her to the guidance counselor. Move forward 2 spaces.

You feel too self-conscious about your body to participate in gym today. Move back 1 space.

You hear a vicious rumor about a girl's long sexual history, and you don't pass it along or acknowledge it.

Move forward 1 space.

You see a group of girls whispering and laughing about one of their classmate's unfashionable outfit and decide to compliment her on it, loudly.

Move forward 2 spaces.

You find out that the guys at your summer job are being paid more than you. You decide to talk to the manager, and he gives you a raise.

Move forward 2 spaces.

One of the guys in your class calls a girl "huge," and everyone in the class laughs. Neither you nor the teacher say anything in response.

Move back 1 space.

You decide to enter a robotics competition, but you find out there are no other girls competing. Everyone tells you that you will lose, but you come in 3rd place. Move forward 3 spaces.

Your woodworking teacher suggests that you try home economics class instead. Move back 1 space.

Every time one of the girls in your class raises her hand to speak, the guys whistle and comment on her bra size. You do not say anything to the teacher. Move back 1 space.

You got sent home for a dress code violation and missed a review session for your history test. Move back 1 space.

Your brother never seems to do his laundry or take out the trash, and you have to pick up the slack. You confront him about it, and he grudgingly agrees to make a chore wheel with you.
Move forward 2 spaces.

Your friend shows up to school with a bruise on her eye. When she says she fell, you accept her word for it, even knowing that her boyfriend has a short temper.
Move back 3 spaces.

Your sibling is sick. You have to stay at home to take care of them while your parents are at work and your brother is at school.
You miss your math quiz.
Move back 2 spaces.

You decide to walk home alone from a party at night. You make it back in time to get a good night's sleep.
Move forward 2 spaces.

You take the subway late at night and do not worry about strange men starting conversations with you.
Move forward 1 space.

The army recruiter who comes to your school tells you about all of the great opportunities available to you.
Move forward 2 spaces.

When a guy in school teases you, you challenge him to a fight and win. No one thinks to bother you anymore.
Move forward 3 spaces.

You're the pitcher on a baseball team, and you throw a weak pitch. The team laughs at you and says that you "throw like a girl."
Move back 1 space.

When your grandpa gets sick, your sister stays at home to take care of him. You go to school and ace your math test.
Move forward 4 spaces.

Your friend jokes that your strict
English teacher should get back into the kitchen and make a sandwich. You laugh along with everyone else, but you feel uncomfortable.
Move back 1 space.

You never learn how to do
laundry or cook dinner
for yourself before
you go to college.
Move back 1 space.

You wear extremely low-rise pants to school. Even though
your boxers are showing,
you do not get written up for a dress code violation.
Move forward 2 spaces.

Your friend jokingly suggests that your arms look weak,
and you feel a bit hurt.
Move back 1 space.

You brag about your sexual history, and people
tell you that they
love your stories.
Move forward 3 spaces.

Your teacher calls on you repeatedly in class, more than girls with their hands raised.
You are able to contribute often and intelligently.
Move forward 3 spaces.

Your dad teaches you how to
change a flat tire.
Move forward 2 spaces.

